DEFENDANT JOHN J. COTA'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO SEVER CHARGES AGAINST DEFENDANT FLEET MANAGEMENT, INC.

CR 08 0160 SI

1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Allowing the government to try both Captain Cota and Fleet in the same courtroom at the 3 same time would prejudice Captain Cota, because it would force him to face two prosecutors at 4 once: the United States and Fleet Management, Inc. (“Fleet”), the latter having considerably
5 more latitude to present specious, biased and prejudicial arguments to the jury than the 6 government. Moreover, a joint trial, given Fleet’s apparent insistence on pursuing a defense
7 involving the facts surrounding the licensure of Captain Cota, would subject the jury to evidence
8 and arguments irrelevant and prejudicial to Captain Cota’s defense of the Clean Water Act and 9 Migratory Bird Treaty Act charges and would thereby undermine the severance previously 10 ordered by this Court. For these reasons, this Court should sever the charges pending against 11 Captain Cota under the Clean Water Act and the Migratory Bird Act from those pending against 12 Fleet and thereby permit Captain Cota to proceed expeditiously to trial on these negligence
13 counts.

14 II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

15 The case against Captain Cota and Fleet arises out of the government’s investigation into 16 the allision of the M/V COSCO BUSAN with the San Francisco Bay Bridge on November 7,
17 2007. Originally, on March 17, 2008, the government filed an Information against Captain Cota,
18 alleging misdemeanor violations of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (“Clean Water Act”)
19 and the Migratory Bird Treaty Act based on his alleged negligence while aboard the COSCO
20 BUSAN on the day of the incident. On April 22, 2008, a grand jury returned a superseding
21 indictment against Captain Cota adding two counts of making a false statement in violation of 18
22 U.S.C. § 1001(a) based on Captain Cota’s medical examinations in January 2006 and 2007.
23 These charges allege that Captain Cota failed to disclose material medical information
24 concerning his prescription medications to a doctor during the licensing renewal process months
25 and years before this incident. Importantly, there was no allegation that these alleged false 26 statements had anything to do with the allision.

27 On July 21, 2008, this Court granted Captain Cota’s motion to sever the false statement counts from the Clean Water Act and Migratory Bird Treaty Act counts, on the grounds that the alleged false statements were “not of similar character or based on the same act or transaction as defendant’s alleged negligence” in connection with the allision and that the Indictment did not allege that “that the alleged false statements and negligent acts [were] part of a common scheme or plan.” United States v. Cota, No. 08-CR-0160, slip op. at 2 (N.D. Cal. filed July 21, 2008) (emphasis added). Accordingly, the false statement counts were severed from those charging violations of the Clean Water Act and Migratory Bird Treaty Act and these latter counts were set for trial.

The next day, July 22, 2008, the government filed the Second Superseding Indictment, adding Fleet as a defendant (the “Second Indictment”). In the Second Indictment, the government realleged without change the false statement charges against Captain Cota. Significantly, however, even though it amended and modified some of the allegations it brought under the Clean Water Act by adding allegations against Fleet, it did not add any language alleging any connection between Captain Cota’s alleged negligence and his alleged false statements.

The Second Indictment did add six new counts against Fleet alone, three charging obstruction of justice under 18 U.S.C. § 1519 and three charging false statements to government investigators under 18 U.S.C. § 1001(a). According to those counts, Fleet employees falsified or destroyed essential vessel documents such as passage plans, and deliberately lied to federal investigators after the allision. Importantly, Captain Cota is not named in any of the six newly pled counts nor are there any allegations he played any part whatsoever in misconduct alleged.<sup>1</sup>

On August 14, 2008, Fleet filed a Status Conference Statement with this Court. As is discussed further below, in this filing, Fleet revealed that one of its primary strategies in defending against the Clean Water Act and Migratory Bird Treaty charges will be to present salacious, speculative, and baseless “evidence” regarding Captain Cota’s past conduct and his alleged lack of sobriety on the day of the allision. The point of this character assassination will

1 be to attempt to convince the jury that despite the conduct of its crew, Fleet bears no
2 responsibility for the incident. Status Conference Statement (“Status Conf. Stmt.”) at 7. Fleet
3 intends to present “evidence” that Captain Cota was under the influence of drugs on the morning
4 of the incident, id. at 7, even though he tested negative for alcohol and drugs immediately
5 following it. It will argue that Captain Cota suffered from drug abuse and instability. Id. at 2-5.
6 Fleet also intends to prove that Captain Cota suffered from medical conditions that rendered him
7 unfit for duty. Id. at 4-5. Fleet intends to use this argument to demonstrate that Captain Cota
8 never should have been licensed in the first place and that therefore, the government is ultimately 9 responsible for this accident.

10 In ordering severance, this Court has already concluded that evidence relating to the false
11 statement charges against Captain Cota-including evidence about his medical conditions and 12 prescription medications- is irrelevant to those alleging violations of the Clean Water Act and the 13 Migratory Bird Treaty Act. Yet it is this same irrelevant and highly prejudicial and 14 inflammatory evidence that Fleet now says it will attempt to use at trial. Severance is necessary
15 to preserve Captain Cota’s right to be tried on evidence properly admissible against him on the 16 severed claims and not to be unfairly tarnished with unfair prejudicial innuendos and 17 unsubstantiated allegations this Court has already concluded bear no relation to his conduct on 18 the day of the incident.

19 III. ARGUMENT

20 A. Legal Standard

21 Rule 14 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure permits the trial court to order
22 separate trials for defendants where the typical arrangement of joint trials would prejudice a 23 defendant. Fed. R. Crim. P. 14(a); United States v. Tootick, 972 F.2d 1078 (9th Cir. 1991).
24 While inconsistent defenses alone typically do not create the necessary prejudice, severance is 25 required when there is a “considerable risk that each defendant, ably throwing pot-shots at the 26 other, would make the government's case for it,” United States v. Green, 324 F.Supp.2d 311, 325
27 (D. Mass. 2004). Antagonistic defenses also raise a concern that a defendant will be forced to 28

1 defend against extraneous or scandalous charges that would not be permitted in a separate trial.

2 As the Ninth Circuit stated in Tootick:

3 Defendants who accuse each other bring the effect of a second
4 prosecutor into the case with respect to their codefendant. In order
5 to zealously represent his client, each codefendant's counsel must 6 do everything possible to convict the other defendant. The 7 existence of this extra prosecutor is particularly troublesome
8 because the defense counsel are not always held to the limitations
9 and standards imposed on the government prosecutor. Opening
10 statements, as in this case, can become a forum in which gruesome 11 and outlandish tales are told about the exclusive guilt of the 12 “other” defendant.

13 Tootick, 952 F.2d at 1082.

14 Thus, severance is appropriate where defendant shows that, if a jury accepts his co-
15 defendant’s theory, it cannot acquit him. In Tootick, for example, two defendants stood trial for 16 assault after a man was stabbed and hit by an automobile. The first defendant, Frank, presented
17 evidence that the other defendant, Tootick, acted alone in stabbing the victim. Tootick did not 18 testify, but his lawyer presented evidence that Tootick was too intoxicated to even remain
19 conscious during the episode, much less carry out the attack on his own. Given these conflicting
20 defenses, if the jury believed Frank, it could not acquit Tootick. Based on these facts, the Ninth 21 Circuit ruled that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying the severance motion. In 22 addition, the court pointed out that Tootick’s counsel referred to Frank seventy-two times in his 23 opening statement, making unsubstantiated allegations that a prosecutor would never have been 24 permitted to make. Id. at 1084. For his part, Frank’s counsel used his cross-examination of 25 government witnesses to “reiterate the prosecution’s charges against Tootick and to emphasize 26 Tootick’s guilt.” Id. Given this mutual finger-pointing by the defendants, the Ninth Circuit
27 noted that it was unsurprising that the prosecutor simply stood back and “rested on the logical 28 impossibility of accepting both defendants at their word.” Id. at 1085. Moreover, due to the massive amount of prejudicial tit-for-tat that had occurred during the trial, the Ninth Circuit held that even “a set of lengthy and accurate instructions delivered at the end of the trial [will be] received by a jury that has already been numbed by the conflicting defenses and is ready to believe nobody.” Id. at 1085-86. Accordingly, the court held that the trial “resulted in manifest prejudice.” Id. at 1086.

The Ninth Circuit’s decision in United States v. Mayfield, 189 F.3d 895 (9th Cir. 1999) is also instructive. In that case, two defendants, Mayfield and Gilbert, were charged with possession of cocaine with intent to distribute. A confidential informant told police that Mayfield was in an apartment preparing rock cocaine. When police executed a search warrant based on the informant’s information, they found Gilbert in the apartment; Mayfield ran out the back door. Gilbert, while detained by police, told them that the man outside was Mayfield and that he was “the main man.” Mayfield was later caught and arrested. At trial, Mayfield argued that the use of Gilbert’s statement would violate his Confrontation Clause rights. The court agreed and admitted the statement only after redacting Mayfield’s name. However, on cross-examination of the detaining officer, Gilbert’s counsel made it clear that Gilbert had stated he was working for someone else, “the main man,” and proceeded during his closing argument to assert that Mayfield was the “main man” in Gilbert’s statement. Further, despite the Court’s instruction not to discuss the confidential informant, Gilbert’s attorney questioned a police officer in order to establish that the informant had only mentioned that Mayfield was inside the apartment, and that the search warrant only named Mayfield and not Gilbert. The Ninth Circuit held that severance should have been granted because “Gilbert’s counsel used every opportunity to introduce impermissible evidence against Mayfield—evidence that could not have been admitted against Mayfield had he been tried separately” Id. at 905.

B. The Focus of Fleet’s Defense Makes It Logically Impossible For A Jury To Believe Fleet and Simultaneously Acquit Captain Cota

Fleet’s defense of the Clean Water Act and Migratory Bird Treat Act charges turns on demonstrating to the jury that Captain Cota is solely to blame for the incident aboard the COSCO BUSAN. The Status Conference Statement leaves no doubt that, while it will attempt to shift the blame onto a variety of parties, Fleet will focus primarily on savaging the character and conduct of Captain Cota. Fleet expressly states that the question of whether the crew was negligent must be viewed “in light of [Captain] Cota’s [alleged] medical condition and drug use.” Status Conf. Stmt. at 7. Fleet further states that while “the Government has asserted that the crew should have stopped Cota from navigating on an allision course, the question remains-did Cota display observable evidence that he was incapacitated by drugs.” Id. at 7. It will be “up to Fleet” to develop “not only the linkage between his drug use and loss of situational awareness but also the fact that the drugs in question did not cause Cota to display an outwardly sign of intoxication” Id. In other words, Fleet’s defense will be premised on proving that Cota was incapable of piloting the ship and therefore negligent while at the same time arguing that there was no visible evidence of his inability and that the crew is thus blameless for failing to stop him.<sup>2</sup> Severance should be granted on this basis alone.

Moreover, permitting the charges against Captain Cota and Fleet to be tried together will undoubtedly result in the “manifest prejudice” to be avoided under the Ninth Circuit’s decision in Tootick. Fleet’s proposed defense relies on salacious and unfounded accusations of past drug abuse, drug use on the morning of the incident, and a “history of piloting accidents due to a ‘loss of situational awareness’”. . Status Conf. Stmt. 2, 4, 7. None of these accusations has any basis in fact and at trial it will be part of Cota’s defense to rebut them. The government, for its part, has never presented any of these theories in its Indictment or elsewhere. Nonetheless, the government, just as in Tootick, will be able to just passively sit back while Fleet presents this uncorroborated and prejudicial “evidence”, and then point out to the jury that, given the antagonistic and conflicting nature of Fleet’s and Captain Cota’s defense, someone must be lying. Tootick, 952 F. 2d 1085. Thus there is a “considerable risk” that Captain Cota and Fleet “ably throwing pot-shots at each other” will “make the government’s case for it”. United States v. Greene, 324 F. Supp. 311, 325 (D. Mass. 2004). Severance is therefore warranted.

<sup>2</sup> Captain Cota was not under the influence of any drug or alcohol but that fact is not pertinent to Fleet’s hyperbole.

C. Fleet Seeks To Introduce Evidence Against Captain Cota That Would Not Be Presented If Captain Cota Were Tried Separately

Severance should also be granted because if Captain Cota and Fleet are tried together, Fleet will rely on evidence that would not be permitted in a separate trial. In its July 21, 2008 Order, this Court granted Captain's Cota's motion to sever the counts based on his alleged false statement for failing to provide information regarding current medications in connection with the physical examinations required by his pilot's license in 2006 and 2007. This Court determined that, as alleged in the indictment, those statements were not of a similar character nor were they based on the same transaction as his alleged negligence in connection with the November 7 allision. The allegations in the new indictment do not alter this finding. As a result, in the trial of the counts brought under the Clean Water Act and Migratory Bird Treat Act the government will be precluded from presenting evidence relating to those statements. That should include evidence of Captain Cota's medical conditions and prescription medications. Fleet, however, does not feel bound by that finding. As a theory of its defense, Fleet claims that the Coast Guard and California Board of Pilot Commissioners were negligent in licensing Captain Cota, given his alleged lack of fitness for duty based on Captain Cota's medical conditions and prescriptions. Fleet apparently intends to rely on, for example, the alleged testimony of Dr. Robert Bourgeois at the NTSB hearings that Captain Cota should not have been licensed as a pilot. Status Conf. Stmt. at 2. Fleet also intends to use evidence relating to Captain Cota's medical condition to show that "the Coast Guard failed in its mission to prevent an unfit pilot from piloting the Cosco Busan". Id. at 4. Fleet expressly acknowledges that the government would not be able to present this evidence at trial. It therefore claims that "[s]ince the charges against Cota regarding his drug use were severed for trial," it will up to Fleet to develop and rely on evidence of Captain Cota's past drug use, the effect of those drugs on him and the crew's lack of knowledge of those effects. Status Conf. Stmt. 7.

Thus, there is no doubt that if the charges against Fleet and Captain Cota are tried together, Fleet will take "every opportunity" to introduce evidence relating to Captain Cota's

1 medical conditions and prescription medications inflammatory and highly prejudicial evidence
 2 that the government would otherwise be barred from presenting. See Tootick, 952 F.2d at 1082.
 3 Therefore, because under these circumstances, “the decisive evidence of guilt’ will be 4 “provided by a co-defendant”, severance is required. Mayfield, 189 F.3d at 907 (quoting Zafiro
 5 v. United States, 506 U.S. 534, 543 (1993) (Stevens, J., concurring)).

6 IV. CONCLUSION

7 Because a joint trial would result in manifest prejudice to Captain Cota, this Court should 8 order separate trials for Captain Cota and Fleet on the counts charging violations of the Clean
 9 Water Act and the Migratory Bird Treaty Act.
